THE LAZY FROG

A frog and a crab lived happily in a pond. There was plenty to eat and the pond was filled with water to swim in. Then the dry season came. Soon, the pond dried up with only a puddle of water left.

"I think we should dig a hole to live in. Otherwise someone might come along and eat us up," said the crab.

The frog was feeling lazy "Oh, I will just hide myself in the grass," he said.

The wise crab dug a hole for himself. Soon, the grass wilted and the frog went looking for a home. He found an old tree trunk and tried to hop into a hole in it but was chased away by a snake that lived there.

At last the frog had no choice but to beg the crab for some space for him to come in.

"I'm afraid this hole is not big enough for the two of us," said the crab.

The frog went out of the pond to search again for a new home. But alas, the snake, which had spotted the frog, sprang on him and ate him up.
